FAA Production Studios Staff and Volunteers were on hand this year for the AOPA Expo (Aircraft Owners and Pilots Association) that took place in Tampa and the NBAA Show (National Business Aviation Association) held in Orlando.

Staff and volunteers helped man the FAASite booth and the Studio Remote Video Crews were on hand at both shows to cover events and shoot some "Plane Time" interviews with plane time host Ben Coleman.

Coverage included media events such as the presentation of FAA Certificates to aircraft manufacturers, several deals between major product manufacturers and aircraft manufacturers and many industry announcements.

Studio Public Relations had the opportunity to hand out studio media kits and meet with many aviation industry publication representatives throughout both events. We took the opportunity to meet and interview several aircraft manufacturers and product rep's as well.

Thanks to all the crew that helped get ready for and staff both events. The FAA Production Studio was well represented and very well received. We made many new friends and had a great time promoting the studio and all the hard work each of you do to make the FAA Production Studio a successful venture.

See you all soon!!!! We look forward to a great 2006!
